

WILD WORLD

Kids can't get enough animal facts! Whether hot or cold, fast or slow, big or small, these animals have many differences but also a lot of similarities. Readers will learn about lots of different types of animals and more in the new Wild World series, a continuing series all about animal comparing and contrasting. All the books in these brand-new series brim with colorful photographs and fascinating facts about the featured animals' body, diet and habitat. Short blocks of text entertain and explain why these animals are super slow, or live in cold climates or are extremely large in size.

LIFE IN THE DESERT

The animals and plants that live in sandy deserts can all survive with extreme temperatures and little water. Plants, such as cactus, are usually small and have small leaves or spines. This helps them save water.

FACT Deserts are also home to more than 1 billion people around the world.

Many animals have light-colored fur to keep cool and protect their skin. Long eyelashes and furry faces keep sand and sun out of their eyes and ears. Some desert animals are herbivores. They eat plants. Others are carnivores. They eat meat. Some eat both.
